

POTTY TRAINING 101

READY?

Is your child interested in using the potty?

Can they raise and lower their pants quickly by themselves?

Do they pee only a couple of times a day?
(That means they have the ability to "hold it!")

Do they understand what wet, dry, pants, potty, pee, and poop mean?

Probably most important — can they understand and follow simple directions like "Please come here" and "Please sit down?"

SET?

If your child shows these signs regularly for three months, then it's time to start.

It usually happens sometime between 24 and 30 months, but every child is different.

GO!

Let them know everybody goes potty! Leave the bathroom door open while you use the potty and tell them what you're doing. Show your child your pee or poop and show them how to flush.

Get into a routine. Go when you get up, go when you leave the house, go before bed. And get to know the times when your child needs to go so you can help them get to the potty on time!

Use a potty chair or toilet ring. If you use a potty chair, put it in the bathroom.

For starters, have them sit on the potty chair without a diaper a few times a day. Read them a book or give your child a special toy to play with while sitting on the toilet. Stay with your child while they are in the bathroom. Even if your child just sits there, praise them for trying.

Use positive reinforcement like stickers on a chart or other rewards when they succeed.

When you see your child squirming, squatting, or holding their genital area, respond quickly! Praise your child for telling you when they need to go.

Thanks to UMKC Bachelor of Health Sciences students for their help with research and content.

POTTY TRAINING 101

FOR BOYS

Avoid the spray! Start teaching boys to pee sitting down until they are comfortable with knowing they have to go, getting to the potty on time, and how to go.

When it's time to stand up, use a step stool or a potty chair until he's tall enough to hit the regular toilet.

Toss some Cheerios into the toilet for target practice!

FOR GIRLS

Girls spray, too, especially if they are seated far back on the potty with legs propped apart to steady themselves. Teach them to keep their legs together and pointed straight to the tip of the seat to avoid a mess.

Dresses are easier to manage than pants, but they can also land in the toilet or get in the way. Teach her to tuck the hem of her dress into the collar to keep it dry and out of the way.

To avoid urinary tract infections, teach her to wipe cleanly from front to back. Or you can teach her to wipe the pee first and then use a separate piece of toilet paper to wipe the poop.

OTHER TIPS FOR SUCCESS

Celebrate the graduation from pull-ups / training pants and make a big deal out of wearing "big boy" or "big girl" underwear.

During and after training, avoid overalls, belts, and leotards — clothes that allow for quick pull-down will help prevent accidents.

If they still wet at night, use pull-ups / training pants until they're dry in the morning.

Use a plastic mattress cover to make clean-ups easy after night-time accidents.

Remember, potty training can take a few weeks up to a couple of months, and most kids will have accidents for six months or so after training, so be patient!

If they are not interested or they resist training, it's okay to back off and start again later. Even if you're ready, they might not be!

REFERENCES

Au, S., & Savinoha, P. (2008). Stress-free Potty Training: A Commonsense Guide to Finding the Right Approach for Your Child. New York: AMACOM, American Management Association.

Mayo Clinic Staff (2011, November 16). Potty training: How to get the job done. Retrieved from www.mayoclinic.org.

Christopherson, E.R., Mortweet, S.L., & Daughtry, H. D., Sr. (2003). Parenting that Works: Building Skills That Last a Lifetime. Washington, DC: Magination Press.

Blum, N.J., Taubman, B., & Nemeth, N. (2003). Relationship between age at initiation of toilet training and duration of training: a prospective study. Pediatrics, 111(4), 810-814.

